The Lessons from the COVID-19 Pandemic and HIV

- Many of us were engaged in the COVID-19 pandemic response as providers, investigators, community, and scientists.
- The knowledge and experience of HIV research, care, and education served as the building blocks for the COVID-19 response. And many of us worked on the frontlines.
- And now, the lessons of the COVID-19 pandemic are being used to improve knowledge, care, and services for people living with HIV.
- Just a few examples: the expansion of at-home testing, telehealth, and telemedicine approaches, vaccine awareness, and systems of care redesign.
