STIGMA is a social justice, human rights, and public health issue.

- Stigma refers to the negative attitudes, beliefs, and discrimination that people living with HIV may experience due to their status.
- Stigma involves the devaluation and labeling of individuals based on certain attributes, leading to social exclusion or marginalization, which can negatively impact people affected by HIV.
- Stigma is the result of social disapproval, prejudice, and stereotypes associated with HIV, and thus it disproportionately affects marginalized communities and their access to HIV prevention, testing, treatment, and care.
- Stigma’s negative impact on both individuals and vulnerable communities affected by HIV reinforces social injustices, jeopardizing efforts to end AIDS as a public health threat.

#ZEROHIVSTIGMADAY
Prudence Nobantu Mabele (July 21, 1971 - July 10, 2017) was one of the first women in South Africa to disclose her HIV status. Prudence set a precedent to encourage other women with HIV to discuss their status with loved ones, to live without shame, to seek treatment, and to lead happy and fulfilled lives. We chose Prudence’s birthday to honor her work and tireless activism to end HIV stigma.
HIV stigma involves the devaluation and labeling of individuals based on certain attributes, leading to social exclusion and/or marginalization.

HIV stigma influences people’s perceptions and beliefs, leading to discrimination (tangible actions that result in unequal treatment or denial of rights).

HIV stigma can manifest as institutional, intersectional, and self-inflicted (personal) ways.

Internalized HIV stigma may lead to negative self-perception, shame, and negative mental health outcomes.

#ZEROHIVSTIGMADAY
People affected by HIV often face stigma, which takes different forms including self-inflicted, interpersonal, institutional, and societal stigma, creating multiple barriers to achieving positive HIV and other health outcomes.

HIV stigma leads to a violation of human rights, leading to stigmatizing attitudes fueled by misinformation, fear, and prejudices.

HIV stigma curtails the ability of people affected by HIV to access life-saving HIV prevention and treatment services.

HIV stigma and discrimination have detrimental impacts on individuals and communities affected by HIV, by reinforcing social injustices and hindering access to prevention, testing, care, support, and other resources.
By eliminating HIV stigma, we will:

- Realize the right to dignity, health, and wellbeing for all people affected by HIV, including their quality of life.
- Reduce fear of disclosure and social isolation, and allow people to live more openly and as their authentic selves.
- Drive demand for HIV testing, facilitating earlier diagnosis; timely access to HIV treatment, care, and social support services; and leading to U=U (Undetectable equals Untransmittable*).
- Enable open conversations about HIV, promoting accurate information about transmission and prevention, and encouraging individuals to adopt preventive measures such as PrEP and harm reduction strategies.

*A person living with HIV who is on a durable antiretroviral therapy regimen and reaches an undetectable viral load cannot transmit the virus to sexual partners. The risk is zero.
